

KENTUCKY GAZETTE.

NEW SERIES—NO. 36. VOL. III.]

LEXINGTON, K. SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1817.

[VOL. XXXI.]

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY MORNING,
BY JNO. NORVELL & CO.

The price of subscriptions to the KENTUCKY GAZETTE, is, THREE DOLLARS per annum, paid in advance, or FOUR DOLLARS at the end of the year. The terms of advertising in this paper, are, 50 cents for the first insertion of every 15 lines or under, and 25 cents for each continuance; longer advertisements in the same proportion.

THE PUBLIC

ARE respectfully solicited by their humble servant JAMES M. PIKE, to notice his New Establishment on Pike Street, three doors below the Office of the Kentucky Gazette, and immediately opposite Maj. Fisher's Tin Ware Store, in the opening of which, he has spared neither trouble nor expense (within the limits of his ability), to furnish in a manner suitable for their convenience and accommodation, and where he is now anxiously waiting to obey their commands, flattering himself he shall be able to give proper satisfaction in every branch of his profession, and promising strict attention and punctuality to the execution of their respective orders. The Gentlemen's Dressing Room being apart from his front Shop, affords him the pleasure of respectfully inviting the custom of the Ladies, and the prospect of his soon having a supply of stock, will enable him to keep constantly on hand, a general assortment of Frisettes, Clusters, Bandanas, &c. which if they fail in point of elegance or workmanship, will be cheerfully taken back and the money refunded.

Gentlemen's Crop Wigs, natural, handsome, and becoming, furnished at a short notice and under the same obligation—and while he encroaches upon the attention of the public, by this lengthy communication, permit him to present his sincere and unfeigned acknowledgments, for the very liberal encouragement he has received since he has become a resident in this place; hoping by his future exertions to please, he will merit a continuance of their patronage.

He has just received a small invoice of Goods from the eastward, among which are, a few elegant Steel Pens; Silk Suspenders, inferior to none in the town; Sealing Wax, in boxes for the Toilette; also in sticks, of a superior quality; Perfumed powdered Soap in boxes; French Tooth Powder; Tooth Brushes; Rings, fine and superior; Tongues; Hudson Oil for the hair, the properties of which need only to be used to be known; as it is pronounced generally, superior to any oil ever before imported; a few elegant Shawl Boxes, made of Rice and lined with Tortoise Shell; Needle Cases; Count Plaster; Shaving Boxes; Watch Trunks and Chains, double Gilt; a few pair of superb Stocking Ties; Spanish Segars of the real genuine Cuba Tobacco; Torpedoes; Sporting Segars, &c. &c.

All favors gratefully acknowledged by the Public's devoted humble servant,
JAMES M. PIKE.
CASH and the highest price will be given for good HUMAN HAIR.

NOTICE.

FOR the purpose of enlarging my business,
and expecting to be absent from this State, in the eastern states, about four months, I have interested Mr. John D. Jamieson, in the whole concern of my shop, which we now keep in the new three story Brick House, on Main street, Lexington, a few doors above the Office of the Kentucky Insurance Company, on the same side, and next door below the Wholesale Store of Messrs. John P. Schatzell & Co. Mr.
Jamieson will attend himself strictly to the business; and being well provided with suitable hands, he will be ready at all times to serve my former customers and others, that may please to call on him for anything in the Clock, Watch, Silverware, and Jewellery Business; in the best manner, and on the shortest notice.
I have also authorized Mr. Jamieson, with Mr.
Benjamin Stout, to attend to all my other business in my absence, to whom, or either of them, any person having business with me will please to apply.

English Cattle at Auction.

ON Monday the 20th day of October next,
will be sold without reserve, a choice stock of CATTLE for breeding, being the entire stock of the subscriber, who has given great attention for several years past in selecting the best animals that could be procured in this state, for that object—they are principally from the stock of Peebles, Hume, Inskip, Smith, and Crockett, with the young cattle of his own raising, and are now sold not from choice but necessity; there are no cattle in the state superior to them, either in form, color or blood. Farmers and graziers, who have not this breed of cattle, will at this sale, have an opportunity of supplying themselves; those who have them know their value, and will no doubt enlarge their stock. A steer of the improved breed, will fetch from the butcher at 3 years old, double the money that a steer of four years old will of the common breed, whereby a year's keep of the animal is saved, the risk of life for a year, and double the sum is put into the farmer's pocket, one year sooner, which is another saving or gain of the interest—and further, this breed of cattle gives a greater quantity of milk.
In no country in the world, do butter and cheese bear as high a price as in this, compared with the price of grain. The stock consists of 150 head, amongst which are, some choice MILCH COWS, HEIFERS, CALVES and YOUNG BULLS. Sale to commence at 12 o'clock—Terms, 12 months credit for negotiable notes with approved endorsers.

June, 1819, within the states, territories and districts, following, viz.

1st. At Detroit, Michilimackinac, Green-bay, Fort Wayne, Chicago and their immediate vicinities, and at any other place or places where troops are or may be stationed, marched or recruited, within the territory of Michigan, the vicinity of the upper Lakes, and the state of Ohio, and on, or adjacent to the waters of Lake Michigan.

2d. At any place or places where troops are or may be stationed within the states of Kentucky and Tennessee.

3d. At St. Louis, Fort Harrison, Fort Clarke, Fort Armstrong, Fort Crawford, Fort Osage, or Fort Clark on the Missouri river; and at any other place or places where troops are or may be stationed, marched or recruited, within the state of Indiana, and the territories of Illinois and Missouri.

4th. At Fort Montgomery, Fort Crawford,
Mobile, Fort St. Philip, New-Orleans, Baton Rouge and Fort Claiborne; and at any other place or places where troops are or may be stationed, marched or recruited within the Mississippi territory, the state of Louisiana and their vicinities, north of the Gulf of Mexico.

5th. At any place or places where troops are ed or recruited within the state of Georgia, including that part of the Creeks' land lying within the territorial limits of said state.

A ration to consist of one pound and one quarter of beef, or three quarters of a pound of salted pork, eight ounces of bread or flour, one gill of rum, whiskey or brandy, and at the rates of two quarts of salt, four quarts of vinegar, four pounds of soap and one pound and one half of candles to every hundred rations. The prices of the several component parts of the ration must be particularly mentioned in the proposals, but the United States reserve the right of making such alterations in the price of the component parts of the ration as they may see proper.

The ration as aforesaid, shall make the price of each part thereof bear a just proportion to the proposed price of the whole ration. The rationers are to be furnished in such quantities that there shall, at all times, during the term of the proposed contract, be sufficient for the consumption of the troops for six months, in advance, of good and wholesome provisions, if the same shall be required. It is also to be permitted to all and every one of the com-mandants of fortified places, or posts, to call for, at seasons when the same can be transported, or at any time, in case of urgency, such supplies of like provisions, in advance, as in the discretion of the commander shall be deemed proper.

It is understood that the contractor is to be at the expense and risk of issuing the supplies to the troops, and that all losses sustained by the depredations of the enemy, or by means of the troops of the United States, shall be paid by the United States, at the price of the article captured or destroyed as aforesaid, on the depositions of two or more persons of credible characters, and the certificate of a commissioned officer, stating the circumstance of the loss, and the amount of the articles for which compensation shall be claimed.

The privilege is reserved to the United States, of requiring that none of the supplies which may be furnished under any of the proposed contracts, shall be issued, until the supplies which have been, or may be furnished under the contract now in force, have been consumed.

GEO. GRAHAM,
Acting Secretary of War.

Note.—The Editors of Newspapers who are authorized to publish the Laws of the United States, are requested to insert the foregoing advertisement once a week, until the 1st of October next. June 23—15t

Mr.

TO MAJOR CARTWRIGHT,
THE VENERABLE LEADER OF REFORM.North-Hampstead, Long-Island,
August 1, 1817.

MY DEAR SIR—Amongst the consolations that I daily experience, I know of very few which can be put in competition with that which I received in a letter from you, brought out to me by one of our most worthy and excellent friends at Westminster, whom I saw last Sunday, in perfect good health. The bare sight of the writing of that hand which has been for so many years employed in the service of your country, in circulating the sentiments of that mind which has been the great cause of all the prodigious efforts made in the cause of reform; the bare sight of your handwriting would have given me very great pleasure, but this pleasure was very much heightened when I saw this venerable hand employed, in this case, to express your decided approbation of the step to which I had resorted; and I beg you to be assured, that, if any thing were wanting to strengthen my determination still to devote my time to the great cause of freedom in England, the contents of your letter would amply supply that deficiency.

I perceive, however, and I really do perceive it with some regret, that Mr. Wooler, who has recently become distinguished by his bold, manly, and just attacks upon our enemies, and who has been rendered justly conspicuous by the means taken to crush him, and of which means I shall speak by and by, has not only expressed an opinion concerning my conduct, exactly the opposite to that which you have been pleased to express; but who, for reasons which it is not worth while, perhaps, under the present circumstances, to dwell upon, or at all to develop, though they are quite obvious to me; for these reasons he has thought proper, not only to express his disapprobation of my withdrawing from the country, but so to charge and overcharge his attack with personal and base abuse as to make it effectually defeat its own object, and to put forward its claims, its irresistible claims, to every particle of that contempt which he would fain, for the reasons before mentioned, have fixed upon my conduct and character.

The reasons stated by me for my voluntary exile, appeared to my own mind so satisfactory, that I never, for one single instant, doubted of their meeting with the approbation of every real friend to the cause of reform. These reasons have not been combated by Mr. Wooler by other reasons, but by downright personal abuse and calumny; by imputations which he knew to be false, and by assertions, in numerous instances, which he knew to be as destitute of truth as any of those pretended plots and conspiracies which the baseness of the nation's enemies have led them to resort to; and the few instances in which he has resorted to something in the shape of argument, have only discovered to the enlightened reader, that, in this case, as in many others, the powers of describing men and things are very different indeed from those powers by which statements of fact, and conclusions drawn from those statements, are made to produce conviction, and to lead to important consequences.

My reasons for my conduct having remained wholly unanswered, I shall, in this place, merely subjoin some few authorities for the step which I thought proper to take. You remember, sir, that Bastwick, Burton, and Prynne, went to Holland in the times of the bloody Stuarts, and caused their writings to be printed and sent into England. You remember that general Ludlow fled to the continent, and that it was from Switzerland he wrote those famous letters in defence of his countrymen, who, amongst other things had fought and bled for annual parliaments. Mr. Wooler will hardly pretend, that these famous patriots were cowards, though he fixes that term upon me with as little ceremony as if he were talking of a man who had skulked behind a wall in the midst of a battle, and had sent on his soldiers to meet the bayonet of the enemy. These gentlemen talk about the precious blood of Sidney. He forgets, while he is thus talking, that that gallant and truly learned man fled to the continent to avoid the fangs of the despots at home, and, what is more, that it was in voluntary exile that he wrote those celebrated papers which brought him to the block, and which have, more than any other circumstances, endeared his name to posterity. Why, then, let this gentleman boldly call the gallant Sidney a coward, or let him retract this charge of cowardice against me, or let him pass for an envious or silly calumniator. Perhaps, however, the gentleman's wonderfully furious patriotism will not suffer him to receive, as a justification, the example of these men of former times; to accommodate him, then, let us come down to a very late period. Mr. Paine has never been called a coward, that I know of, nor have I ever heard the old congress of America charged with cowardice. Yet, he, as well as they, fled from town to town at even the distant approach of the enemy. This was, indeed, an enemy with bayonets in his hand, of which circumstance I leave Mr. Wooler to profit; but then comes the staggering fact of Mr. Paine, who was an Englishman, you will observe, having fled from England to France, not from the warrant of a secretary of state; not from the natural effects of an absolute power-of-imprisonment law; not from the newly-conjured-up code of lord Sidmouth; but from the bare intimation of an information ex-officio being filed against him by the attorney general!

Thus, then, it follows, of course, that all these persons were cowards; that even Sidney was a coward; that Voltaire was a coward, when he chose a residence in the mountains of Switzerland rather than reside in the Bastille. It follows, also, that the brave Lallemand, and the brave general Vandamme, who are now in this country, are cowards, and that every man is a coward who has fled hither from England, Scotland, or Ireland. Nay, sir, even Mr. Hunt is a coward, (though I would advise Mr. Wooler not to tell him so) because Mr. Hunt did not go to the intended fourth Spafford meeting, agreeably to the resolutions of the third meeting. And, think yourself very happy, sir, if you escape the charge of cowardice; for, beside your being an "old man," old enough to be my father, I am very sure, that you will not attempt to call meetings, and to act at those meetings as you hitherto have done.

If it be cowardice to do what I have done, and what so many eminent and immortal patriots have done before me, every thing must be cowardice which embraces the most distant consideration of personal safety, though connected with the most reasonable expectations of future utility to the cause of our country.—In the estimation of Mr. Wooler, it must be cowardice to take shelter from a thunder storm, 'tis cowardice to avoid being buried by a falling house; it must be cowardice to lower sail in a hurricane; it must be cowardice to resort to a surgeon in the case of a broken leg; in short, this is such superlative nonsense in Mr. Wooler, that it takes away, and fixes in his own bosom, whatever there could be intended as a sting in his calling me a "silly old man."

But in all the examples that we have mentioned, there is wanting this material circumstance which presents itself in my case, that while, by remaining, I could render my country no service at all, by my flight I retained whatever powers I had of rendering her service; and that I did not want the disposition to render that service, my countrymen will, before this time, have been fully convinced; seeing that I have written more; not as much, but more, since my arrival in this country, than I ever wrote before in my life, during a period of the same length. This intention, too, in the very publication upon which Mr. Wooler has bestowed his reprobation, was distinctly stated. He, indeed, ridicules the idea of my seriously entertaining such intention; and the public will have seen, by this time, that his predictions were upon a perfect level with the rest of his attack; the public have now the proof before them, the practical proof, of the falsehood of this prediction; and I am not at all afraid, that the reformers in England will not be able to form a very correct judgment, not of the motives of this gentleman, for those I shall not meddle with at present, but of his conduct towards me upon this occasion.

There was something very ungenerous, not to call it malignant and base, in a pretended friend of that cause of which he acknowledged me to be a supporter, to fall foul thus, before he could possibly know at any rate that it was my intention to write from America; and the great haste to rush on to this conclusion, which was false, as the event has proved, clearly shows a spirit of injustice and malignity; of deliberate malice, and of malice too, wholly unprovoked by any act of mine, or of any body belonging to me, either towards himself, or towards the public. If he had really thought that I should not write from America, was it a public spirited act in him to anticipate such a result? If he was sincere in what he said concerning the great and beneficial influence of my writings, was it a patriot-like act to endeavor to lessen that influence as much as possible by this uncalculated prediction, which has, at last, been proved to be as false as it was ungenerous?

However all the other parts of this violent, malignant, base, and foolish attack, sink wholly out of sight, when compared to the paragraph at the conclusion of it, in which he reminds the Americans of my former writings against their government, and against what he calls their "infant liberty," and bids them to be "jealous" of me. Consider, sir, all the circumstances under which this was penned, and then say, whether, even in the conduct of the tools of the borough-mongers, you ever heard of any thing quite so base as this.

Little did this man imagine that I had published a Register in America, beginning with the month of January, 1816, and that, in the very first number of which, instead of crawling to the Americans, and recanting any thing that I had said before, I plainly told them, that I did not ask them to "forget and forgive," but that I wished them to remember, that, if my writings had done them harm in Europe, (and that I did not know that they had not done them harm,) it was fairly to be ascribed to the unjust and tyrannical treatment which I had experienced in America. This was published at New-York last year, long before I had any thought of coming to America. But, here I am now. This Register that I am now writing, will be published in New-York before it will reach England; and here I repeat my former words, with this addition, that being now accidentally here upon the spot, I will yet have justice done me for that tyrannical treatment; or, in case of refusal of justice, I will make known to every corner of the world what that treatment was. I am no flatterer of any body. My opinion as to the English government, and as to the mode of electing members of parliament, has undergone a great change since I was in America before; a change arising from experience; a change perfectly natural in itself, and perfectly consistent with honorable intentions and views, having always been upon my mind. But, so far from acknowledging, that I was an enemy to real freedom, when I was in America before, I maintain that I was always its friend; and, I maintain further, that in my person that freedom was most grossly violated in America. However, better times are now come. No such despot acts can be committed now. Here is a just, and mild, and cheap government, and a free and happy people. A very glorious sight it is to behold. I feel gratitude towards the government and the people, for having preserved their country free, and for affording me a place of refuge. But if Mr. Wooler imagines that I am come here to be a slave of the Americans, and to care anything about their jealousies or prejudices, he is the most mistaken man alive. I know that I have the esteem of all honorable men; but never will I do any act, never will I utter one word to make my court to them. I have a real and sincere regard for the people.—Their kindness towards me upon all occasions, shown in every village and every house that I go to, is alone well calculated to inspire me with sentiments of regard and affection; and I show these best, by endeavoring, as far as in my power lies, to do justice to their excellent institutions, by describing to the world their happy effects. But, if there be any persons who require me to go further; if there be any body who will not be content unless I turn my back upon my own country, either by abjuring the king, (as the loyal English merchants do here,) or by any other act, no matter what, to such persons I answer, I still love England best; and I will never do or say any thing that can be, by any means, construed to imply that this preference is ever to be rooted from my heart. I say now, as I said in my leave-taking address, a palace here, with the whole of this beautiful and happy island for my domain, would be less dear to me than a thatched cottage on the borders of Waltham Chase, or of Botley Common.

Mr. Wooler will do me the justice to suppose, I hope, that I shall take the will for the deed, though, perhaps, he may be somewhat disappointed at perceiving that any attempt of his to excite jealousy of me, and ill will against me in America, is likely to be full as fruitless, and is certainly a great deal more ridiculous, than his expectation of producing a similar effect in England, though I am very sure, that he will there meet with disappointment in his expectations in this regard, and even before now his malignant attempt has received the scorn that it merits; and, more than it merits, it cannot, I think, possibly receive.

Nevertheless, Sir, as you have often said, and you once told the attorney general, who is now the lord chancellor, we must, in fighting the enemy, not reject the use of arms of even despicable and detestable men. He asked you whether you would have no regard to the characters of men in this case. You said that you would rather have to do with all men of good character, but that, as thieves and robbers and swindlers were sent on board of ship to fight the foreign enemy of the country; so you saw no reason why you should be so very scrupulous in the materials of which the ranks were composed, which were to fight against its enemies at home. Though I have a right, a perfect right, to presume every thing that is base in the character of this Mr. Wooler, I do not so presume. His conduct has been base towards me? But I am even willing to hope, that want of experience, want of time for reflection, extreme anxiety for the success of the cause, some misrepresentation, perhaps, and (a weakness too common amongst literary men) an eagerness to obtain fame, which rendered him too impatient to confine himself to efforts to rise, without endeavoring at the same time to pull others down: I am willing to hope that his malignity has been thus engendered, as it were, without his own wish; and that a little more time would have made him act towards me with more generosity and less injustice. At any rate, upon your old principle, I take the assistance of his pen as far as it is capable to aid the cause of our country, and I do most sincerely rejoice at his acquittal on trials for libel, the statements in both of which were as true, as his statements with regard to me were false. His defence, which I have read in the English papers, was not only bold and manly, but it was full of talent; and though the attorney general made a great mistake, when he said, that it was a proof of facility of composition, that a man was able to put his thoughts together by the means of types without manuscript, the fact being that many men can write as much in a day as six or seven compositors can print; still, it was a most interesting fact that this was done by Mr. Wooler, and it was a proof amongst thousands of others, that might be produced, of the great stock of talent now possessed by the people of England.

To go on into all the particulars of the trials would be useless; but I cannot help observing, that in one part of Mr. Wooler's defence, he complains what a hardship it was to have been dragged all of a sudden from his affairs; and he adds that if he had had a wife and family, the consequences must have been dreadful. Mr. Wooler is too sincere a man, I dare say, to have feigned this, in order to move compassion; therefore we may perhaps be permitted to ask Mr. Wooler whether he did not happen to know that I had a wife and family, and whether he did not happen to know that that wife and all the feeble part, and only the feeble part, of that family were in London, at very time that he was aiming his malignant shafts against the head of that family? I observe too, that Mr. Wooler expressed a wish not to be found guilty, that is to say, not to be imprisoned and fined! Bless me! wish not to be imprisoned! Beg not to be imprisoned and fined! Why, one would have supposed that this gentleman, who by implication, accuses Ludlow, Sidney, and Paine of cowardice, would have courted imprisonment, as the greatest of favours, like the methodist parson, or like Jack in the Tale of a Tub, who cried out, "another box in the ear, good folks, for the Lord's sake!" I, indeed, as you remember very well, suffered two years' imprisonment, and paid a thousand pounds fine, without liking it at all. But this gentleman's taste appeared to be so very different; that one might naturally be surprised; instead of which, he makes most strenuous efforts to save himself from it; and, from present appearances, I have very great pleasure in believing that those efforts are likely, in the present case at any rate, to be successful. If they should not, and if he should have two years imprisonment to suffer, a fine of a thousand pounds to pay, and be compelled to give bail in a five thousand pounds bond to be of good behavior for seven years afterwards; when he comes out of prison, and has paid his fine, and given his bail, he will be better able to judge than he is at present, of the manner in which he ought to talk of the step which I have taken. But, as Mr. Wooler has ventured upon predictions with respect to what I should do, he will excuse me if I hazard a prediction with respect to him, especially as it shall be wholly divested of malignity. I predict, then, that he, Thomas Jonathan Wooler, will be silenced, by some means or other, before next Christmas day; or that he will write in a very measured style, and be very mannerly towards the ministers; or, that he will come to America himself, and that, if he does come to America, he will be a printer, and not a writer. I most sincerely desire, that a state of things will arise such as will enable him to continue to write boldly in England; but if he must follow the example of Mr. Paine, I must confess, that I am ill-natured enough to wish to have an opportunity of calling upon him in New-York or Philadelphia, between one of which and an English jail, his choice, if he has a choice left, appears to me to lie.

WILLIAM COBBETT.

FROM BUENOS AYRES.

Information has been received by the ship Sally, arrived at Boston on the 11th instant, in 63 days from Buenos Ayres, that troops were collecting at Chili, and contracts for ships had been made, for an expedition against Lima. Prisoners were daily brought from Lima to Buenos Ayres, who principally entered into the patriot service.

The sloop of war Ontario, Capt. Biddle, left her anchorage at New York on the 13th instant, and was to proceed to sea the first fair wind.

Through the politeness and attention of our Norfolk correspondent, we have been favored with a paper of that city of yesterday, which, however, does not present much matter of interest. The schooner Charles K. Mallory, Capt. SROOK, had arrived there from Lisbon, which port she left the 1st of July. The conspiracy at Lisbon was completely put down, and order and tranquility restored. About one hundred of the conspirators had been apprehended and imprisoned in different castles. On the 29th of June the first intelligence of the re-capture of Pernambuco by the royalists reached Lisbon, and great rejoicings took place in consequence of the event. The king of Portugal with all his family, were preparing to leave Brazil and return to Lisbon.

About the 27th of June, a Portuguese frigate captured a patriot ship of 20 guns off Oporto. The latter was from Montevideo, and was cruising in company with a schooner, when they both attacked the frigate, and the contest ended in the capture of the ship and escape of the schooner.

FROM THE BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER. The following is a brief summary of the principal contents of our Buenos Ayres papers to May 24. The articles here noticed are hardly important enough to be translated at length.

Auxiliary Army of Peru.—Bulletin, No. 19, dated at H. Q. in Freeman, April 9, gives an account of operations from March 20, to the date. The royalists in Jaqui remained closely besieged. Their troops dare not set a foot beyond their entrenchments; their communications with the interior are so insecure, that strong convoys are necessary. They lose men, arms and beasts every day. On the 29th of March, there arrived at Headquarters, 142 deserters and prisoners, and to-day 31, besides 81 on their way. March 25th, the royalists entered the town of Oran, where they plundered houses and churches, and lost 80 men and 60 horses. By the different parties of guerrillas, 36 men have been killed, and more than 300 animals taken. Parties under lieutenant Colonel Torre, commanders Gorriti and Corte, and majors Saravia, Zerda, Maurin and others, carry on hostilities with great firmness and success, and not a day passes but they kill some, and bring in deserters and prisoners.

Bulletin, No. 20, is dated April 30, and gives a narrative of operations from the 10th to that date. On the 15th, the royalist General Serna, by a rapid and bold movement, took possession of the town of Salta. His army, however, has been constantly harassed by the parties under the different partisan chiefs, and sustained constant losses.

Bulletin, No. 21, dated May 1, gives an account of the capture of the town of Farfaja, by a party of the republican troops under Colonel Madrid, in which he took 254 prisoners, 400 muskets, and a considerable quantity of munitions of war.

A subsequent paper contains a despatch from Manuel Belgrano, General of the Auxiliary Army of Peru, dated at Tucuman, May 3, which states that the enemy have not derived the advantage which they expected from the possession of Salta, that they have carried on hostilities with great activity and fury, sacrificing their men, and that they lose many by desertion. This despatch is accompanied by a number of letters from Don Martin Guemes, governor and commandant of the province of Salta. In one of these he estimates the enemy's force which entered Salta, at 2500 men, and those remaining at Jaqui at 600, besides 4 or 500 employed in conveying baggage, &c. He gives the details of numerous trifling advantages gained by him, but it is apparent that on the whole the Army of Peru had for the last month been rather losing than gaining ground.

In Chili, the royalist power seems to be less formidable. On the 4th of April a party of 6 or 700 royalists attacked the republican advanced posts at Carapigue, but were repulsed with the loss of 19 men killed and 19 made prisoners and deserters.—The republican loss was 4 killed and 7 wounded. On the 22nd of April, brigadier general Seignior Don Bernardo O'Higgins, had left Col. Don Hilario de la Quintana in command of St. Jago, and proceeded as far as Talca, with 800 men to drive out the remainder of the royalists from the province of Concepcion.

April 14.—San Martin, captain general of the Army of the Andes, who was then at Buenos Ayres, addressed to the supreme director of state, a letter giving a particular notice of the officers who distinguished themselves in the great battle of Charrabuco, on the 12th of February.

April 15.—An order was issued by Pueyrredon, the Supreme Director of State, conferring certain honors on San Martin, "to whose indefatigable zeal and military skill the country owes the greater part of the glory of that day," and on the officers and men of the army.

The Gazette of April 26, contains a list of about eighty distinguished citizens of Chili who had been confined as prisoners at the Island Juan Fernandez, but who in consequence of the late success of the republicans had been released and restored to their friends.

The fishing vessels carried into Halifax, remained there at the last dates, without having been brought to trial. It is conjectured a statement of their case has been sent to England, and that their fate will depend on orders from thence.

The Halifax merchants are anxious that American fishing vessels should be excluded from the bays and harbors of Nova Scotia, because, as they say, if they are permitted, the British fishermen, &c. at such places will procure their supplies of the Americans instead of obtaining them in the Capital of their own Province, to the ruin of the trade of Halifax.

NEW-ORLEANS, AUGUST 12.

NEW TOWN OF BLAKELY.

This promising sea-port is situated upon the East margin of Tensa river, which is the main channel of the Tombigbee and Alabama rivers into the Bay of Mobile, is about nine miles N. E. from the town of Mobile, and six miles from the head of the bay, latitude about 30° 40' N. its location and name have been granted by an act of the General Assembly of Mississippi Territory.

PENSACOLA AND EAST FLORIDA.

The interest felt by our fellow citizens in the different parts of the United States, in reference to this country, induces us to lay before our readers some information respecting it.

We have good cause for believing that the country alluded to will be in possession of the United States before Christmas next. We are also informed that a distinguished commercial gentleman who has important connections both with the Spanish government and the United States, and now residing at the Havana, has written to the same effect.

Several gentlemen who have been at Pensacola within a few days past, state that the same impression prevails at that place, both among those in power and the citizens, and that on the part of the latter, the circumstance is hailed as a consummation devoutly to be wished. If the event should take place, which we in every point of view deem important and desirable, it will give to the N. States the best, and almost the only harbor in the Gulf; the most healthy situation in the southern section of this country; an important naval depot; an extremely advantageous commercial position; will leave us without any contiguous foreign government, in which criminals, refugees from justice, can with impunity seek a protection from punishment, and will render the Alabama territory among the most desirable sections of the U. States for residence and business of every description.—Mobile Gazette.

NEWS FROM EUROPE.

FROM THE DEMOCRATIC PRESS.

The good people of America are as much surprised at the following news respecting Joseph Bonaparte's new town, as the good people of Europe would be if they knew the facts.—Mr. Bonaparte has purchased a farm in New Jersey, on the Delaware, near Bordenton, about 30 miles from Philadelphia. There Mr. Joseph Bonaparte lives as a private gentleman of fortune ought to live. He accommodates himself to all the manners and customs of the country, and is beloved, esteemed and respected. It is needless to add that in the above paragraph there is not one syllable of truth.

LONDON, JUNE 26.

Joseph Bonaparte's New Town.—The

Dutch Mail of yesterday supplies the following account of the ex-king of Spain's Colony in the United States:—"Joseph Bonaparte is building a town near Baltimore, which none but French are permitted to inhabit. It is capable of containing for the present 12,000 inhabitants. The art of the most sublime architecture is employed to embellish the edifices. Thus it should seem, that the French refugees renounce the hope of ever returning to the continent of Europe, since they spend their whole fortunes in fixing themselves in so magnificent a manner in America."

THE PRESIDENT'S TOUR.

The pomp and unmeaning parade of our Eastern friends, in the reception of the President in his progress through the country, has been so disgusting and so different from what was to have been expected from the plain simplicity of Republicans, that we have not felt bound to notice all the fine things which have been done or said to him, but have merely remarked the different stages of his progress, and some of the most interesting incidents attending it.—Western Spy.

Sound Policy.—It is due to the administration to notice the excellent policy which it pursues in relation to the wrongs, which Americans occasionally endure from foreign powers. In the case of the detention of certain of our citizens on the Spanish Main, a frigate was despatched with an agent, to demand redress. A similar course is adopted, we observe, with respect to the execution of an American citizen by president Petron, and the sequestration of American property by king Christophe, of Hayti. It is in this energetic way that we wish to see the rights of the people of the United States enforced as they regard foreign powers. Let it be understood, in every region of the earth, that an injury done to an individual American, is an injury done to the whole republic: so shall we be respected among the nations.—Nat. Register.

THE LATE DELUGE.

YORK, PA. AUGUST 12.

"What is the foundation of your hopes?"

It is with pain we sit down to detail the events of last Saturday. This town has been visited with an awful calamity; not equalled perhaps by any similar event on record. As minute a detail as can be given from memory, follows:—

About 10 o'clock on Friday evening, the atmosphere, it was remarked, appeared uncommonly heavy; and it suddenly became unusually dark and began to rain moderately. About 12 o'clock, the rain had increased very considerably, and about one became violent. It continued to pour down till about 1 o'clock on Saturday afternoon; when the sun again shone forth in all his glory. The gloom and heaviness of mind felt by man in consequence of the unusual and incessant storm, which indeed had excited some melancholy forebodings, seemed to be dissipated by the returning brightness of the sun; health, cheerfulness and safety seemed to reign once more. But the Codorus had swollen beyond its banks and the attention of the inhabitants was drawn to the north side of the town, by the destruction of the large wooden bridge, connecting George street with York Haven turnpike road. This was looked upon with indifference. It was a novelty to see a whole bridge move off majestically upon the bosom of the flood. No alarm was felt. The water in the mean time was rising so as to cover High street from beyond Water street to Newbury street. The people removed from their lower stories but felt very little or no alarm. News at length came that the dams of the mills and Spring Forge above had been broken away. This was communicated to the people on the West side of the stone bridge, with a request to save themselves by going to a place of safety, while the water was so that they could yet wade it. But danger was not apprehended by them. Their houses would save them many supposed, and therefore they remained. At length the water from the broken dams in the country above came tumbling down, in tremendous torrents. At this time many people were taken away from their houses by Col. M. H. Spangler, first with a horse and afterwards with a boat, to which at one time eight persons had got hold, so that it was almost impossible for him to get along with the boat. A few minutes more and it would have been too late. The creek had now risen so much that all communication was cut off between the people in their houses and the shores. The danger of removal was greater than that of remaining. They had no choice but to stay. Each one seemed to be nailed to the spot he was on awaiting the moment of being precipitated into the flood. The torrents tumbled across the streets like water falling from a precipice. At this moment you could contemplate the Codorus swollen into a mighty River from a quarter to a half mile wide, and deep enough for a seventy four.

A stream that has its source in our own country, and known to us as pleasant little water to amuse us in fishing, and which affords a scanty supply of water for mills and machinery, was in the space of two or three hours lost, we know not where, and a mighty River in its stead comes rushing thro' our houses, and bearing upon its bosom the wrecks of the bordering country. An ocean seems to have been created and precipitated upon us in a moment. At this stage of the flood, bridges, barns, stables, dams, haystacks, houses, and broken mills came one after the other in succession tumbling from the country above us; house after house rose in our streets upon the waters and was hurled into the bottom of the deep. We could see our helpless fathers and mothers, sisters and brothers, children and relations of every degree, and our friends and neighbours, stretching forth their arms from roofs and windows for help, expecting the house that sustained them would instantly tumble from under them or float down the torrent with them. You could hear the cries of the dying and the living all around you. All stood fixed in breathless agony, taking a last look at some dear object of affection. Every face was the image of misery and despair. Human help was vain; it all rested in the hands of Almighty God. All realized during the awful space of nearly two hours that "He can create, and He destroy," and that it was to Him alone we must look for safety. The expanse of several miles of water below the town, was covered with undistinguishable ruins. Roofs floating down with people on them reaching and crying for assistance: stables with dogs, fowls and domestic animals; wrecks covered with tables, beds, bedsteads, chairs, desks, bureaus, clock and clock-cases, trunks, cradles, sideboards, and many other articles of furniture and clothing, dry goods and groceries; barrels, hogheads, timber and mill wheels, trees, wheat and rye sheaves, corn, oats, fences &c. all tumbling with lifeless bodies down the stream in torrents! The small and weak houses one after the other disappeared. The people left, gathered mostly in and upon the strongest houses by leaping from roof to roof, and by beating holes from one garret to another.

In some instances the house they jumped from was swept from under their feet, just saving themselves by a single second. It would be endless to detail all the hair-breadth escapes, and to enumerate all the activity and exposure of individuals for the purpose of aiding each other, and saving themselves. All was done that human power could effect.

It remains now to detail the loss of human lives. It is believed ten persons were lost, viz. four coloured people, names not recollected, and 6 white persons [whose names we have before published. The paper from which we copy the above, contains a list of fifty-four houses which were destroyed in York, by the inundation.]

FROM THE LONDON OBSERVER.

DRURY LANE.

Othello.—Mr. Kean & Mr. Booth.

It falls to our lot to speak of Mr. Booth as matched with the actor he has chosen to imitate; (for to a certain extent we are persuaded that he has imitated Mr. Kean.) There is something daring in this wrestle of talent, particularly as one of the parties has been tried, and found to be a powerful creature. From what we saw on Thursday evening, we are convinced that Mr. Booth is a very clever young man—as young men go; that he will be an acquisition to the new school of playing, and may do much towards shewing that there ought to be but little difference between the parties before the lamps and behind them; and that Mr. Kean is one of those fine and fiery spirits that stand, as it were, upon the heart of nature, and control its pulsations. Mr. Kean's Othello, on this occasion, was one of the most surprising achievements that genius ever perfected. We will venture to assert that there never was a grander and more pathetic piece of acting on the English stage; of course on no other stage. He seemed to feel he was put on the race, like a blood horse, and to take a pleasure in the struggle, and a justifiable pride in the success of his endeavors. Mr. Booth was matched to run against him; at least we know that many persons had made the knock of Mr. Booth an argument against the genuine talent of Mr. Kean; but Kean beat his antagonist hollow. He played Othello from his very soul, and he sent the fierceness and misery of the Moor into the hearts of all his hearers. Kean played himself into a state of absolute exhaustion more than once. His face was a mirror to his heart; and all its shades of terror and suspicion flitted over it, like Banquo's shadows. Mr. Kean's style of acting is of the same quality with Lord Byron's style of poetry; it is magnificently ferocious when in a state of violent excitement—fearfully pathetic in unexpected passages, and mysteriously attractive in general. In Bertram, (Maturin's tragedy) he was the Corsair himself; the same furious pirate, the same terrific lover, the same outcast at heart from all his kindred and kind, with the like broken fortune and bewildered hopes, and with a similarity in rash projects, daring deeds, and withered feelings. Kean's Bertram, though a direct nonentity in the way of morals or pure high-mindedness, was a fine bold picture of an ardent and warlike nature, wrecked on the storm of its own feelings, and wandering about on the shore of the world, desolate, and proud, and savage—hating the earth and trusting not the heavens; pursuing man with the fierceness of a tiger, and hoarding up in his bosom the remains of his shattered passion, like a miser. Bertram, like all the heroes of Lord Byron's tales, would be despised and hated from our presence, if he had not a mystery in his air that betokened a mental superiority over his kind, and a certain fulness of personal courage. Mr. Kean always played Othello with a beautiful earnestness; but on the other evening, he seemed to feel his fame snatched at by a stranger hand, and the consequence was, that he put forth all his energies, and arose on the wings of genius, like an eagle, above his opponent. Who shall now say that Mr. Kean is not a man of the fullest genius? He makes "the breath of glory real." There was no art: (or if there was we could not discern it)—no feebleness, except from excess of exertion, and then such an exhaustion is the perfection of agitated feeling; no unmeaning turbulence in his representation of Othello: he trusted himself to the power of his enthusiasm, and it did not betray him. Othello is of all others the character for Kean. It is pregnant with bursts of the deepest pathos and the wildest passion. It is full of gusto. What in English poetry, for a certain grandeur of characteristic feeling, can go beyond that sudden thought of desolation in Othello, when he finds that Desdemona's faithfulness has stricken down all love of glory and the world. Othello is a noble personification of an eastern battle. A sun-like being habited in golden robes, with a turban and sabre; the love of war being the very passion in him—a part of his nature. Mr. Kean proved his genius by his manner of delivering that most touching passage, "Oh! now farewell forever! &c." What a spirit of soul-felt partiality there is the recollections of "the ear-piercing life," "the plumed troop," the neighing steed, the cannon, the drum! What a pride, pomp, and circumstance of war! And all hurled down! Kean wrought the house into a breathless silence by his utter loneliness of heart on the delivery of this passage. And a dead quiet of this kind is deeper applause than the shouts of forty nations joined together. His voice seemed to be going away forever. You felt alone after he had spoken. It was too pathetic for words or thoughts or tears.—It was.

We have seen Mr. Kean in Othello four times before this representation; but like Caius Marcius, "he outdid himself doubly" in the last struggle. Kean fought the Coriolanus battle of his fame on Thursday. He hath disciplined all other actors soundly. We are glad we are not on the stage at this day; for we hate to be deficient in complete success, in any great pursuit; and there is no saying nay to him. Shakespeare has said, that "if two men ride upon one horse, one must ride behind," and Mr. Booth must have found the truth of this by the present time.

LEXINGTON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 6.

General Carrera has, it is stated, made his escape from Buenos Ayres to Montevideo, of which the Portuguese have possession. We trust that a spirit of vengeance towards the tyrant Puerreydon, may not lead the General into the ranks of the Portuguese, the enemies to his native country, and to the cause of liberty, in which he has hitherto been so zealously engaged. His fair name, his love of country, and its independence, forbid the taking of so criminal a step.

Liverpool papers to the 9th of July, mention a considerable decline in the price of flour; quoting it at 66 to 67 shillings per barrel. The crops were promising in England, as is the vintage in France. The English parliament was to be prorogued on the 16th of July. Mr. Ponsonby, the opposition leader in the house of commons, had been attacked with a paralytic, and was expected to lose the use of one side. Lord George Cavendish was to succeed him as the opposition leader. A number of Napoleon's French officers have entered the Persian service. Arrests, trials, and condemnations continue in France. A General, another superior officer, and the sister of Madame Monthon, were apprehended in Paris on the 2d of July. Troubles are stated to have broken out at Malta.

EXTRACT TO THE EDITOR, DATED

Washington City, Aug. 25.

"I have given you almost ad infinitum, an account of the various reports current here and elsewhere, relative to the persons who are most probably to form the entire cabinet and diplomatic corps of the United States, under president Monroe. You will look upon these as mere rumors, except, perhaps, in the case of Mr. Rush. With respect to Jonathan Russell, I believe it will be found that his visit to Europe is with a view of returning to his post, of minister to Sweden, at Stockholm. He came to this country, it may be presumed, principally for the purpose of getting married. No doubt both himself and his friends would have been glad if he could have procured some leading situation in the administration; and the friends of Mr. Christopher Hughes could have had no objection to the same thing, as it would have given that young gentleman an opportunity of figuring as charge d'affaires at the Swedish court. If Mr. Russell returns, Mr. Hughes will remain mere secretary of legation, a post, nevertheless, perfectly honorable, and better suited, I think, to the age and experience of Mr. Hughes, than the place of charge."

"The newest thing which we have in this quarter, worthy of public notice, is the discovery of a new principle in magnetism, by which the longitude may be readily ascertained. JOEL ABBOT, of Washington, Georgia, member elect to the 15th congress, claims the honor of the invention. It is simply this: take a small steel globe, impregnate it with the magnetic virtue, place it on a fluid, (quick-silver) or in a situation where it will traverse, and as you move it east it will turn east, or west and it will turn west. Divide the earth into a number of longitudinal meridional lines, and the globe of steel into as many corresponding lines, and you will have, at once, a very simple method of computing the longitude. As it often happens in these cases, another person is endeavoring to deprive Mr. Abbot of the honor and profit of the discovery. A Dr. Hall has gone off to London to claim the reward so long ago offered by the British government. His machine is said to be wholly constructed according to Mr. Abbot's principles, and, having been tried at sea, has been found accurate. I hope this invention may, in all respects, be adequate to Mr. Abbot's expectations. It will do honor to our country, and will class the author of it in the rank of Franklin and Rittenhouse.

Mr. Sergeant has arrived at Philadelphia from England, having successfully closed his specie negotiation. The Salem folks are much engaged with a great sea serpent, which has paid them a visit."

EXTRACT FROM WASHINGTON.

"You will observe that a report is again in circulation, that Mr. CLAY is likely to consent to come into the 'Cabinet' as war minister. This word 'Cabinet,' which ought never to enter the republican vocabulary, is becoming quite too familiar to the American ear, as are many other courtly expressions and practices at this place. To constitute this 'Cabinet,' there must be members of the different departments. The responsibility, which ought to attach to the President, is frittered away and dispersed amongst the members of the 'Cabinet.' After a while, should any particular branch of the government act with folly or corruption, the 'minister,' one of the limbs, must bear all the blame; and the head, who ought to control its motions, will escape censure. We shall begin to hear that 'the King can do no wrong.' I would resist every approximation towards British forms and notions, as I would the incipient approaches to an all-devouring whirlpool."

But to return to Mr. Clay. I am not of opinion that he can see any thing in the War Department sufficiently inviting to allure him from the station which he has for some years filled with so much honor and real advantage to the country. As speaker of the House of Representatives, his dignity, his inflexible impartiality, and his singular promptness, secure for the character of that body the respect of all who witness its deliberations, and the greatest practicable dispatch in the conduct of the public business.

On the floor he is equally an object of admiration, whether you regard his ardent and manly eloquence, or his bold and comprehensive views. Since every man cannot be President, there is no situation in my humble judgment more honorable than that of Speaker of an American House of Representatives. It is entitled to infinitely more consideration than seems to be generally attached to it. In comparison with that, the station of Secretary of a Department is not to be named.—The Speaker is selected by the assembled wisdom of all this nation, recommended by his tried talents, his impartiality and public virtue. The secretaries are but instruments selected by a single individual, for a particular purpose. In the judicious selection of these agents, in finding men whose capacity and qualities are most precisely adapted to the station, consists, it is true, the true art of administering to the best advantage the affairs of the nation.—A Speaker of the House of Representatives, being chosen by its numerous deputies, may be almost infallibly considered the faithful mirror of that nation's talents and virtues. In him is embodied as it were the true spirit of the times; not so with this or that man, who happens to be the secretary of a particular department. He is designated by at least a fallible individual, and unfortunately sometimes perhaps less with a sole and distinct view to his peculiar fitness and to the public good, than from other considerations; for a secretary of the navy, for example, some dealer in cod-fish might be selected, distinguished for nothing but an ostentatious attempt to acquire fame by associating his name with the memory, not the personal dangers, of some gallant hero; or this secretary, when better known, and acknowledged to be utterly destitute of all the qualifications either of mind or manners, might be continued for fear of hurting his delicate feelings. Various indeed are the motives which may lead to the designation of other public agents: locality; family connections; "high standing," and supposed consequent influence; the desire of animating the luke-warm or apathetic the positively hostile: all these may influence an individual in the choice of his agents. But the speaker, (if I did not despise all shades of titles, I would call him the "honorable") of the House of Representatives, is not likely to be appointed under any influence unconnected with the welfare and feelings of the PEOPLE. Why then should Mr. Clay give up the probability of a reelection to a post where the eyes of the nation are upon him? where every step is marked, and every breath is caught—to sit in a big armed chair, and keep the register of a petty army? An apothecary or his boy may hold in connection the bones of a dead man: it is the proud privilege of a physician to watch and correct the motions of the heart and arteries; preserving life and vigor in the system. I do not think that Mr. Clay will commit an act of self-injustice, by retiring from the great forum, where measures are to be discussed and adopted, upon which the honor and the safety of the nation hang, to sign his name to army contracts, warrants and commissions, which might be done by John Doe or Richard Roe. Of himself and his labours it might in such a case be said:

Parturient mores nascitur ridiculus mus.

In the national Legislature there is some reason to hope and believe that a great question will be agitated involving the rights and the happiness of a vast and interesting portion of the world. There may indeed be useful. It is a subject every way worthy of the contemplation of the most enlightened statesmen; and it is believed that Mr. Clay has regarded it with a judgment and solicitude honorable alike to his head and his heart."

Extract of a letter from a young Kentuckian in South America, to his friend in Lexington, dated LIMA, March 18, 1817.

"The splendor of the palace of the vice-roy in this place, is not equal to what I had expected to find it; but the magnificence of the churches is far beyond my powers of description. On the altar of one of the churches, called La Merced, it is said, there are gold and silver to the amount of no less than a million of dollars. A crown piece to the Virgin Mary, in another church, cost thirty thousand dollars. Churches, convents, &c. without number. There are also some other edifices of considerable size; but all the labor, riches and taste, appear to have been spent upon the churches. In the public squares, convents, &c. there are copper fountains continually spouting fine fresh water. In all the streets running east and west, there is a canal of water, which adds very much to the cleanliness of the city. Lima contains a population of about sixty thousand inhabitants, composed of ten or twelve thousand Spaniards, and the rest Indians, negroes, and the innumerable mixtures between them and the whites. The climate is the most delightful you can imagine: it is a continued spring the whole year round; between the coldest and the warmest weather the thermometer does not vary more than 10 degrees. Every species of fruit grows here in perfection throughout the year: we have at our table, every day, delightful apples, peaches, oranges, and pine-apples. It never rains; and only two or three instances of its ever having thundered or lightened here, are recorded in the history of this place; on which occasions the citizens ran distracted into the country, kneeled before their Maker, and in the sincerity of their hearts, begged his forgiveness in what they considered the day of universal dissolution. Earthquakes here, produce the most horrid ravages: Callao, the seaport of Lima and about six miles distant, was entirely destroyed about forty years ago. The earthquakes, of any degree of severity, do not happen oftener than once in every twenty or thirty years; but what they call here tremblings, are almost as common as rains in Kentucky. There has been one of these since my arrival, and it was taken notice of with about one-half the concern I have seen excited on a farm in the United States, by the flying of a hawk over a hen-roost. In consequence of the earthquakes, the houses have no roofs, such as ours: long strips of wood are laid flat upon the top of the wall, and on them a layer of ashes half an inch thick, and this is sufficient to preserve them from the weather, as they never have more than a thick fog, which cannot penetrate their slight roofs. The want of roofs to the houses, gives them a very awkward appearance, & if they were black on the outside instead of white, a stranger arriving from Europe, would think that the city had been destroyed by fire. The mildness of the climate and the richness of the soil, have all tended to enervate the inhabitants; on the men it has had the effect to make them weak and indolent in the extreme. The Spaniards smoke segars, and only exert themselves as far as it is necessary to keep the others in subjection. Perhaps to these causes, which have had such an evil effect on the men, may be attributed the surprising beauty of the women. It is a very surprising thing indeed to meet with a young woman that has not the most regular features, fine black eyes, and pretty shape. Their dress is singular, and is almost the first thing that strikes the attention of a foreigner: the stuff of which their outer petticoat is made, is worked in such a manner, that it has the elasticity of stockinet: it is belted tight round the waist and fits the body as close as possible, so much so that they can only take very short and deliberate steps, and it causes them to reel from one side to the other like a sailor. They do not wear bonnets; an apron of black silk, open before, drawn backwards over the head and arm, covers every thing from the waist up but one eye. Their feet are handsome and extremely small, of which they appear to be conscious; they take pains to shew them, and scarcely a young woman of any description is seen in the streets without silk shoes and stockings. They marry at twelve and thirteen; and at five-and-twenty they are old, ugly, and not fit to be looked at."

HEAR WHAT THE VIRGINIANS SAY.

The Richmond Enquirer in speaking of the "wicked new election scheme" as the Secretary calls it, says, "Republican principles" as well as the "provisions of the constitution" seem to require a new election, yet a large majority of the last legislature were opposed to it. Is the Editor of the Richmond Enquirer influenced by hatred to John Pope and Gabriel Slaughter?—Argus.

The London Globe states, that the sums due to Great Britain from Austria, on loans with the dividends advanced by Great Britain, up to the 5th of January 1817, and the interest on such dividends, amount to 19,362,873l. 5s. The Government having till lately borrowed money at rates generally exceeding five per cent, interest, these advances to Austria, are consequently operating upon the people of England in the shape of taxes to the amount of nearly a million a year.—Lord Castlereagh stated that he had not even asked this debt from the court of Vienna.—Balt. We are happy to learn, that it is the intention of Col. J. Johnston to start a line of stages from Frankfort through Versailles to Lexington. It will go three times a week on days different from the Mail Stage thro' Georgetown, and will afford us a communication with Lexington six days in each week.—Argus.

POSTSCRIPT.

BALTIMORE, AUGUST 23.

We have received advices from England to the 10th of July. The price of Flour at Liverpool on the 10th of July was down to sixty-two shillings. In France the price of Grain had fallen in some instances fifty per cent.

It is stated in the London Courier, that Mr. Sergeant has made arrangements with Messrs. Baring, Brothers & Co. for the payment in London, at the par of exchange, of the dividends upon such portion of the capital stock of the Bank of the United States as may be held by persons residing in Europe.

Extract of a letter to a gentleman in this city, dated HALIFAX, July 22, 1817.

"It is probable that ere this reaches you, you will have been advised that our government has given permission for the importation of fruits and vegetables of every description, and the exportation of rum and molasses, in American vessels, to and from the United States."

By the schr. Spartan, arrived at New-York, in twenty-seven days from St. Salvador, verbal information has been received that all was quiet in the Brazils. Montevideo was still in possession of the Portuguese. A vessel had arrived from Buenos Ayres, which place she left the latter part of June, but brought no political news. The principal leaders of the revolution had been executed at St. Salvador.

Extract of a letter to the Editor—dated

NEW-ORLEANS, JULY 19, 1817.

"The Mexican private armed schooner Hotspur, commanded by Lieut. Rapp, of the United States' navy, and owned in this city, has returned from a cruise in the Gulf of Mexico."

The Hotspur had a very severe engagement near the Havana, with the Cassidore, Spanish government brig (late the Chasseur of Baltimore) and was beaten off, with the loss of twenty-five men killed, and all her standing and running rigging shot away.

The Hotspur came to an anchor at the Balize, where she landed 16 of the wounded officers and men, who were in a dreadful state. She will have to proceed to Galveston to refit, the Spanish consul here having determined to seize her."

COMMISSARY GENERAL'S OFFICE,

Philadelphia, Aug. 19, 1817.

NOTICE.—Written proposals will be received at the Office of the Commissary General of Purchases, until the 30th of Oct. ensuing, to furnish for the United States' military service seventy thousand yards of cotton drilling, and eighty five thousand yards of cotton shirting, of domestic manufacture. Samples of the drilling and shirting, on which it is intended to found contracts for those articles, will be transmitted to any manufacturer who shall make application for them, by letter addressed to this office, with such information as may be requested. A contract will not be made with the same manufacturer, or company, for a greater number of yards than 20,000, of either shirting or drilling. Bonds with sureties will be required for the due execution of all contracts; and no shirting or drilling which shall be declared by the United States' Inspector to be in any respect inferior to the sample on which the contract is founded, will be received at any price. The Drilling is to be 27 and the Shirting 32 inches wide.

Important notice to the Ladies.

THE LEXINGTON MANUFACTURING COMPANY are desirous of obtaining a quantity of fine bleached Linen and Cotton Rags, which are necessary to enable them to manufacture the important article of fine Paper, of which so much is annually imported, and might be avoided, if the patriotism or economy of the Ladies of Kentucky, would induce them to adopt the customs of the Ladies in the eastern states, viz.—To keep a Rag-Bag, which is usually hung up in a place, convenient for the purpose, and in which they will continue to carry that almost daily appear in every large family. At the end of the year your rag bags, thus attended, will produce you a liberal sum for pin-money, and greatly aid the important manufactures of your state.

Six Cents in money will be paid for fine bleached Linen or Cotton Rags; and a price in proportion for coarser quality, or for tow made from flax or hemp.

Apply at the Lexington Manufactory, or to J. & T. G. PRENTISS.

THE WESTERN PIANO FORTÉ MANUFACTURE.

Jordan's Row, next door to the Reporter Printing Office.

T. L. EVENDEN, MANUFACTURER OF PIANO FORTES, (many years in London, and five years in Philadelphia,) respectfully informs Ladies and Gentlemen of the Western Country, that he has removed to Lexington, where he manufactures Piano Fortes; which, for goodness, beauty and price combined, cannot be equalled from any source; on the truth of which assertion, and on that only, T. L. E. presumes to ask that patronage from a discerning public, for which he is solicitous, and hopes when it is found that his Pianos (on the result of long experience) are preferable to others of American make, and no deceiver—and equal to the best imported—made of better materials—stand the climate better—and 20 per cent. cheaper—that he will meet that encouragement that skill, liberality and industry may reasonably hope for from a liberal public, which will at all times be gratefully received by their most obedient servant.

December 27, 1816.—52—11

SILVER PLATING.—DAVID A. SAYRE.

respectfully informs his friends and the public in general, that he will continue to carry on the Silver Plating Business in all its branches, at the old stand next door above the Kentucky Gazette office, and opposite Barton & Craig's Store, Main-street, Lexington. He returns his sincere thanks for past patronage, and hopes by his strict attention to business to merit its continuance.—He has and intends keeping on hand, an elegant assortment of Plated Brilles, Bitts, Stirrup Irons, Carriage & Harness Mountings, &c. which he will sell wholesale or retail, much lower than has ever been sold in the western country. He solicits Merchants and Saddlers to give him a call.—All orders will be punctually attended to, and supplied at the Philadelphia prices.

THE CELEBRATED BULL,

RAISED by Mr. SMITH, who obtained a Silver Cup at two annual exhibitions of cattle under the direction of the Agricultural Society, is at my farm near Lexington, for the convenience of those who wish to improve their breed of cattle. Five Dollars is the price; good pasturage on moderate terms.

This Bull excels in beauty and size any animal of his kind in the state; his calves selling from 50 to 50 dollars from common cows, and from blooded cows as high as 250 dollars. I have not heard of a single one of an inferior description—all are greatly superior to those by other bulls.

JOHN FOWLER.
Lexington, July 26, 1817.—11

Lexington Manufactory.

THE proprietors of this extensive establishment, are happy in announcing to the public, that their buildings are completed and their machinery in full operation.

They are ready to receive orders for all kinds and qualities of BROAD CLOTHS, CAMBRICES, PLAINS, FLANNELS, COATINGS, BLANKETS & NEGRO CLOTHS; also, BELTINGS for paper makers, BILLBOARD CLOTHS, &c. Also, RECORD PAPER, and BLANK PAPER of superior quality of any description, or to imitate any colour and quality at short notice.

Having spared no labour or expense in procuring the best machinery and workmen in this country and from Europe, the proprietors are confident that every article of their manufacture shall be equal in quality to any imported from Europe or manufactured in the United States.

In consequence of their having on hand a large stock of Wool, the proprietors do not wish to receive more at present, but will allow them to obtain in a few months, for which they will give the highest prices paid in any part of America. They will, however, at all times exchange the goods of their manufacture for Wool or Rags. Persons desirous of selling stock or purchasing or ordering goods, will please apply at said factory, or to J. C. & M. D. RICHARDSON, or J. & T. G. PRENTISS.
